Georgia Crisis Intervention Team Program

A New Tool for Law Enforcement

Creating communities where people with behavioral health disorders receive treatment instead of incarceration

WHAT IS CIT?

The Georgia Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Program is a collaboration of professionals committed to assisting persons with behavioral health disorders (mental illness, developmental disabilities, Alzheimer's disease and addictive disease). This collaboration includes local members of the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI), mental health service providers family members, and law enforcement officers. The most important aspect of the CIT Program is the training provided to law enforcement officers.

CIT trains law enforcement officers to effectively and humanly interact with persons with behavioral health disorders (mental illness, developmental disabilities, Alzheimer's disease and addictive disease).

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES:

- ◇ Train law enforcement officers to safely respond to persons in behavioral health crisis.
- ◇ Protect the rights of people with behavioral health disorders.
- ◇ Ensure that people with behavioral health disorders always receive treatment in lieu of incarceration, when appropriate.
- ◇ Improve the quality and quantity of behavioral health services.

- ◇ Promote adequate training for criminal justice system personnel about mental illnesses, developmental disabilities, Alzheimer's disease, and addictive disease.

MORE THAN JUST TRAINING

The mission of the Georgia Crisis Intervention Team Program is to equip Georgia law enforcement officers with the skills to recognize and assist people with behavioral health disorders in crisis, thereby advancing public safety and reducing stigma.

The Georgia Crisis Intervention Team Program is a collaboration of professionals committed to assisting persons with behavioral health disorders in every Georgia community, with a goal of training a minimum of 20% of officers in every law enforcement agency in each of Georgia's 159 counties.

As a part of the continuum of care, CIT is a central member of a team of community stakeholders working to build and provide sustainable infrastructures that offer an array of supports, services and resources that promote mental wellness and recovery. Stakeholders include local members of the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI), behavioral health service providers, consumer and family advocates, law enforcement officers and members of the judicial system.

The Georgia CIT Program is a 40-hour, five day curriculum that is approved by the Georgia Peace Officers Standards and Training (P.O.S.T.) Council. It is comprised of both classroom instruction and practical exercises delivered by mental health professionals, other subject matter experts and CIT law enforcement instructors.

The class features clinical classroom instructions, practical de-escalation role play exercises, lived experiences of consumers and family members (taught by local professionals who volunteer to teach the class), and site visits to local treatment, recovery and support facilities.
